January 21st 2018: The Beauty of Math

Math is beautiful. That may seem like an unconventional description of a subject that is often viewed by students and adults as one of the most rigid school courses. And in the midst of the current climate in our country centering on a haze of questions about standardized high-stakes testing, Common Core, ever-changing curricula, parent misunderstandings about "new math" and a variety of other significant educational concerns, "beauty" is not often the first, second or third word that comes to mind when thinking about mathematics. BUT, join Paula and her Presidential award-winning guest as the
