January 22nd 2018: Civil Rights: Then and Now

As we celebrate Dr. Martin Luther King the civil rights activism he led is a model we need to embrace today. Our civil discourse, racial tensions and emerging public policy all need to be examined in our collective process of moving forward in a just manner. Dr. King drew his inspiration from Mahatma Gandhi's non-violence peace movement that led to the toppling of the British Crown in India. Gandhi believed that "The future depends on what we do in the present". In this episode, we will explore what we ought to do so that we can shape the future we want to make our reality.
