September 12th 2018: Beyond the Rhetoric: 217 Years To Gender Equality at Work?

The buzz: "I'm not the woman president of Harvard. I'm the president of Harvard" (Drew Gilpin Faust at WEF 2015). The World Economic Forum has been studying global readiness for gender because it's as much an economic problem as a global talent necessity. Yet, despite continued program focus, research, and commitments from political and business leaders, the needle has not budged; in some cases, it moved backwards. In a reality where it will be another 217 years for women in the workplace to become equal in all ways to men, it's time to talk about what's working. The experts speak. Desi Kimmin
