August 12th 2020: Youth Financial Literacy, The Naked Truth, Emergency Hacks

Debut novel for Carrie Hayes, Naked Truth or Equality, the Forbidden Fruit is based on the little known, but true story of Victoria Woodhull, the first woman who ran for U.S. President. The challenges the U.S.A. is wrestling with today are the same challenges the country faced 150 years ago. How can you help your kids become financially literate? The sooner you teach your children about money, budgeting, investing, and saving, the more successful they will be. Tips from Schwab introduce the value of money management from toddlers to adults. If an emergency happens when you are outdoors

Carrie Hayes

Over the years, Carrie has tried a lot of things. She's sold vacuum cleaners, annuities and sofas. She's lived at the beach and lived in Europe. She's taught school and worked in film. For a while, she was an aspiring librarian, but she fell in love and threw her life away instead. Back in the States, she started over, and met an architect who said, "Why don't you become a kitchen designer?" So, she did. Eventually she designed interiors, too. And all that time, she was reading. What mattered was having something to read. Slowly, she realized her craving for books sprang from her need to know how things would turn out. Because in real life, you don't know how things will turn out. But if yo
