Raamel Mitchell
Microsoft's mission is to empower every person and every organization on the planet to achieve more. As the Director for Corporate Citizenship and Market Development, I lead efforts to establish public-private partnerships, support economic development initiatives, drive civic and start-up innovation, and manage CSR investments and partnerships across commercial, education, government and community engagements throughout the central United States. For nearly my entire life I have been an avid believer in the power of technology and innovation to shape the world and transform lives. And as the U.S. Citizenship liaison for Microsoft IoT, NASA, and the Managing Campus Director for the Microsof

Birle Bourgeois
Birle has 20 years' experience in the oil and gas industry. He joined Chevron in the Gulf of Mexico in 2001 as a Drilling Representative in Deepwater and Shelf assets. He spent the first 8 years of his career in production, reservoir and operations roles in the Shelf and Deepwater mature assets and large projects. Birle moved to Bakersfield, California in 2009 to lead a large field redevelopment project. In this role he also heavily supported efforts with the State of California on regulatory and permitting matters. In 2013, he moved to Canada as the Manager of Planning and Strategy. In this role, he supported the organization in leading business planning and corporate reporting e

Tom Foley
Developing, launching, and strategically building businesses is the common thread tying together Tom's 25 years of professional work. Tom started his career practicing law in New York, handling large civil litigation, mergers & acquisitions, as well as real estate and land use matters. After actively practicing law for 15+ years, Tom decided to become a "recovering attorney" and founded Indigo Group, LLC, a business consulting practice. This transition was more than a new business opportunity though – Tom founded Indigo on the belief that businesses must drive social impact. In 2017, Tom made the strategic decision to shift Indigo's primary focus from business consulting to business
