July 5th 2021: Encore: Resilience in The Public Sector and Beyond

New Hanover County faces many natural crises due to their location on the coast of North Carolina and the numerous hurricanes that have occurred over the last few years. New Hanover County adopted biologically-based resilience practices from the Community Resiliency Model (CRM) with the goal to create a trauma-informed and resiliency-focused practice toward each person in public service, sharing a common understanding of the impact of trauma and chronic stress on the nervous system. The implementation is integrated as core measures for professional development and as a means to permeate the co

Mebane Boyd
Mebane Boyd is a Licensed Clinical Social Worker, with a Bachelors' Degree in History from Davidson College, and a MSW from the University of North Carolina, CW. As the Family Service Manager with Smart Start, she became keenly aware of the role of toxic stress in preventing children from reaching their full potential. In 2018, Ms. Boyd had the opportunity to bring together her experiences and contacts across her community around the topic of resiliency and creating a trauma-informed community. Under her leadership, there are currently over 100 organizations and 700 individuals collaborating to make Hanover County in North Carolina more compassionate and resilient. In October 2018, Ms. Bo
