May 19th 2022: "My So-Called Selfish Life"- The Filmmaker's Insider View

Tune in

Thursday at 11 AM Pacific
Time on VoiceAmerica Variety Channel

In this show Host Suzanne Phillips is joined by Award Winning Filmmaker, Therese Shechter who discusses her new and powerful film, "My So-Called Selfish Life." Spanning over many years this is a paradigm-shifting journey through one of our society's greatest taboos: Choosing not to become a mother. The film weaves together historical events, medical expertise, and women of different ages and backgrounds who personally and professionally question the biased expectation that women are supposed to have children – regardless of their personal choice. Underscoring the message, the show includes gl

Featured Guest

Therese Shechter

Therese Shechter is an award-winning filmmaker, public speaker, and the founder of the production company Trixie Films. Her work fuses humor, activism, and personal storytelling to explore a host of thorny questions around women's roles and destinies. Therese's most recent film, My So-Called Selfish Life, is a revolutionary documentary about reproductive freedom and one of our greatest social taboos: choosing not to become a mother. The film has been screening in Europe, North America, and Asia, while Therese has fostered discussions on pronatalism and reproductive justice at leading institutions from Harvard to the American Public Health Association. Therese's work has been featured in The
