April 24th 2009: Special Encore Presentation:
What is a "Green" Home?

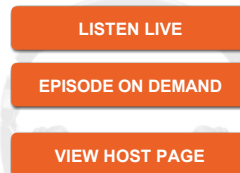

The U.S. Green Building Council has recently launched a new program that sets standards for certifying a residential unit as "green," and today we'll be talking with one of the industry leaders who developed those standards: Peter Yost. Peter serves as an instructor for the Boston Architectural College's Sustainable Design Certificate program and an adjunct faculty member of the University of Massachusetts Department of Building Materials and Wood Technology program in Amherst. He has been building, researching, teaching, writing, and consulting on high performance homes for more than twenty y
