July 31st 2012: 10 Most Common Estate Planning Mistakes

Everyone has an estate plan whether they know it or not. Dead people have no natural defences, so they are easy to rip off. No one understands this better than plaintiff's attorneys and politicians. Litigation involving people's estates is required without the right kind of planning, and so common it is cliché. The dead don't vote, so they are an easy target to tax. Making a mistake in an estate plan is expensive and frustrating, and hard to avoid. Rick and Rich discuss not only what the mistakes and their consequences are, but how to intelligently avoid them.
