May 3rd 2013: Special Encore Presentation: The Campaign to Remove Plastic Water Bottles From National Parks

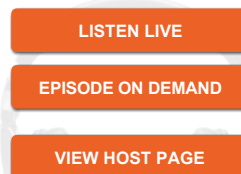

Traffic in National Parks during peak season is significant. Americans have long enjoyed packing in to bring their families to visit our national treasurers, and the fondest memories of many generations happen in our National Parks each year. Adding to the long lines of traffic are trucks bringing in something for sale that is already in the park for free – water. In addition, there are trucks heading out of the parks carrying tons of plastic water bottles. Does this make sense? We'll discuss this issue today with Grace Morris, who is a spokesperson for a campaign to remove plastic water bottl
