Our Wild World
Monday at 8 AM Pacific
May 19th 2014: Born Wild with Tony Fitzjohn

Working tirelessly to put wildlife conservation into perspective for the future, my guest today is Tony Fitzjohn, who's approach to conservation is, to say the least - unique. After close to forty years of hands-on field experience and proven results, Tony and his teams from the George Adamson Wildlife Preservation Trust and WildlifeNOW are amongst the foremost authorities in African wildlife conservation today. Tony and his teams work to re-establish ecosystems and protect endangered species through developing partnerships- internationally and locally, educating future generations about conse

Featured Guest

Tony Fitzjohn

In 1975, one of the wild lions near George Adamson's camp inexplicably attacked Tony, biting him in the throat. The lion was driven off and the badly mauled Fitzjohn was carried back to camp, "Am I dying?" he asked.
