May 20th 2015: In My Humble Opinion

One of the most important things for us when we're ill, especially when we are dying, is the compassion and empathy of our doctors. But how do physicians retain these human qualities with each patient when they are bombarded with multiple losses and the weight of such influence over life and death? How do they avoid becoming jaded and cold, or falling into a perpetual state of numbness or paralyzing emotion? Jordan Grumet does it by writing about his experiences as a doctor and as a person in his popular blog, In My Humble Opinion. He illuminates the experience of this most unusual profession
