If we're fortunate in life, we find and develop strong and lasting connections with important people who really matter to us. They add a beautiful zest that touches us and brings an impossible to describe joy. So, when they leave us and pass on, the grief can be incredibly overwhelming. It was this journey that Marla Lackey unexpectedly embarked upon as she navigated her beloved mother's passing. A registered nurse working in Labor and Delivery, she reveled in bringing souls into the world – now, she'd have to help usher out the one who'd been incredibly precious to her. In this episode, Marla

Marla Lackey

Marla Lackey has been working in Labor and Delivery as a Registered Nurse for the past 25 years at Methodist Hospital in San Antonio, Texas. After taking care of her dying parents, she was blessed to discover the parallelism between bringing new souls into the world and taking care of the souls leaving this world. She has a passion to offer this insight to bring hope and comfort to others going through the grieving process.
