September 22nd 2016: Smart Cities, Smart Streets: IoT to the Rescue - Part 3

The buzz: Honk honk! Beep beep! With all the hype surrounding Smart Cities and the IoT, you may wonder if cities are really changing and if the IoT is making an impact. The answer to both: Yes. But the changes are where you may not expect them – in finance, politics, privacy and security. How can you spot the hidden changes IoT is making in your city, neighborhood, office and home? The experts speak. Charles Anderson, IDC: “Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat” -George Santayana. David Stephenson, Stephenson Strategies: “A merger of top-down and bottom-up systems can inv

Featured Guests

Charles Anderson

Charles Anderson leads the Mobility and Internet of Things (IoT) practice for IDC Asia/Pacific and serves as a strategic advisor to CXO's as their companies address the opportunities and challenges posed by the industry's move to the 3rd Platform, which involves the emergence and interdependency of mobility, cloud services, big data, and social media.

W. David Stephenson

W. David Stephenson, principal of Stephenson Strategies, is an Internet of Things (IoT) consultant, thought leader and journalist. He particularly focuses on a paradigm shift to “circular companies,” away from traditional hierarchies and linear processes, to a new model in which everyone — supply chain, manufacturing, product design, marketing, distribution networks, and perhaps even customers — is united in a continuous cycle with shared, real-time IoT data as the hub; and “SmartAging,” using a combination of wearable devices and smart home devices to allow seniors to “age in place” with dignity, improved health, and lower expenses. He wrote The Future Is Smart (HarperCollins Leadership imp
