August 30th 2019: The Intersection of Older Adults and Technology

This episode of the Living to 100 Club Radio show takes a close look at how technological innovation can improve the health and well being of older adults. Smart homes, virtual reality, artificial intelligence, social robotics and wearables like smart watches and health trackers will impact all age groups but baby boomers are increasingly becoming voracious consumers of cutting edge technology. And, technology companies are beginning to wake up to the emergence of a techsavvy older generation, a phenomenon labeled the "silver rush" that these companies are beginning to cash in on. Our guest,
