December 4th 2019: Camel Crazy, Skin Savvy, Aging in Place

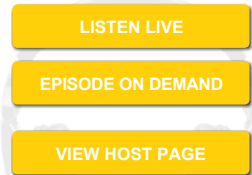

When Christina Adams suspected that camel milk might help her son with autism, a faraway doc helped her smuggle some into the United States. Her son improved and she fell in love with camels. This interview promises a rollicking ode to “camel people” and the creatures they adore. Our skin is the largest organ in our body and probably the one we take the most for granted. Both men and women spend millions of dollars per year on beauty products that they don’t need. How can you have beauty from the inside out? Find out how to take care of your soul and your skin! The desire to age in place
