Featured Guests

Paul Polman

Aside from being a truly remarkable individual, Paul Polman is the former CEO of Unilever. In his 10 years as CEO, he turned Unilever into one of the most wellknown examples for more sustainable and conscious business practices. He focused Unilever on making a social impact and at the same time delivered 8 years of topline growth that was on average twice as high as the overall market growth. Paul moved from from his CEO position in November 2018. He has now created a new Organization called IMAGINE, which helps businesses eradicate poverty and inequality, and address global climate change issues. In this discussion, Paul speaks from experience as a CEO about how to build more conscious and s

Rinaldo Brutoco

Program host Peter Matthies says Rinaldo Brutoco is one of the individuals he always reverts back to when trying to understand whats happening in the world. Whether one wants to understand the financial markets, the political landscape, or climate change, hes one of the few individuals whos got both the knowledge and the strategic brain to explain whats really happening. Rinaldo has founded several companies and served on the board of NY Stock Exchange companies for more than 20 years. He founded the World Business Academy in 1987 and has been helping transform business for over 30 years now. In this discussion, Rinaldo speaks about the impact of the Business Round Table announcement from Jul
