January 26th 2009: The Easy Way to Plan for your Financial Future

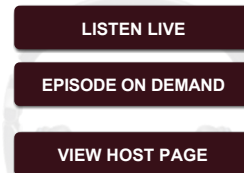

Most Americans do little or no long term planning for their financial future. The end result of this is that most Americans have too much debt and have not saved close to enough for their retirement. Part of the problem is that most people don't know how to use online calculators and are scared off by expensive financial planning services, so they do nothing instead. Monty Hothersall created the Financial Fate website and software to allow the average American to create a realistic plan so they can achieve their financial goals. In this interview and Powerpoint demonstration, he will show what
