October 23rd 2009: Green Dog, Good Dog...Reducing Your Best Friend's Carbon Paw Print

Americans spend nearly $50 billion (yes, Billion) per year on pet products, and not all of them are good for our pets...or the environment. Dominique De Vito, author of "Green Dog, Good Dog," joins us to discuss everything from 'greening' your dog's diet, to eco-friendly dog supplies, how to travel 'green' with your dog, and much more! This episode is not only for Sierra Club members with dogs...this show is for all dog lovers who want to create a healthy, safe, and clean lifestyle for their furry friends.

Dominique De Vito

Dominique De Vito began her pet publishing career at the American Kennel Club, where she was an editor for their magazine, the AKC Gazette. She went from magazine to book publishing, where she was publisher for Howell Book House (now part of Wiley), as well as TFH Publications. Dominique created the best-selling "Happy Healthy Pet" series for Howell, published many of the pet books in the "For Dummies" series, and developed TFH Publications' "Terranova" series - the first to include a DVD with training and health care advice. Now a freelance writer and editorial consultant, Dominique and her family own the Hudson-Chatham Winery in the northern Hudson Valley. You can learn more about the wine
