wealth & happiness!
Wednesday at 12 Noon Pacific
January 26th 2012: Do You Love Your Kids Too Much?

Do you dash to your child's school to defend him or her for the slightest issues that arise? Did you hesitate to write your child's college admissions essay? Have you ever called your kid's boss? If you answered yes to these questions, you may be a helicopter parent. Foster Cline, the psychiatrist who coined the term "helicopter parent," explains how overprotective parents hinder their children's development, and sociologist Annette Lareau, who authored the groundbreaking Unequal Childhoods, defends what she calls the "concerted cultivation" style of middle-class parenting. Ron Alsop, auth

Annette Lareau

Annette Lareau is a sociologist working at the University of Pennsylvania, where she is the Stanley I. Sheerr Professor. Lareau has completed extensive field work studying the daily lives of both African-Americans and European-Americans. She is also credited with the creation of the term concerted cultivation. This concept refers to middle class child rearing practices. She says that this differs from the parents of children in working class families, who attribute much of their child raising tactics to the accomplishment of natural growth. She is the author of Home Advantage: Social Class and Parental Intervention in Elementary Education (1989), coeditor of Journeys through Ethnography: Real
