January 26th 2012: Hong Kong Disguise Master Outwits Counterfeiters

International crime has new face. From knock-off Versace to Rolex watches to phony medications and even counterfeit weapons, globalization has made counterfeiting products a remarkable ten percent of the world's trade. Growing seven times faster than legal products, its consequences for the world's economy is dire. Tune in to hear Master of disguise and private investigator, Ted Kavowras, and his many tales of investigating counterfeit products and bringing those responsible to justice.

Featured Guest

Theodore Kavowras

Following his retirement from NYPD, Ted Kavowras studied Mandarin at China's Nanjing & Kunming Universities. He then became Regional Manager of an international investigations firm. Often as an undercover operative, he credits his investigative success to using different disguises & identities. Ted works directly with Hong Kong Customs & Public Security Bureau to combat counterfeiting in China. Currently, he is Operations Manager for Panoramic Consulting Limited. Ted was recently featured in the National Geographic Documentary "Illicit, the Dark Trade" on PBS where he is shown working undercover in cooperation with Chinese Authorities in Hong Kong and China. He has been featured in CNN
