March 6th 2012: Inclusion Networking

Judith Snow, MA, is a social innovator and an advocate for inclusion communities that welcome participation by a wide diversity of people. She describes her career and life's work as an artist. She explains what inclusion is, what brought her to believe in it, and how she uses art to advance it. She says what inclusion values, and who it creates value for. She describes the opportunities it brings, and explains their value. She identifies challenges that inclusion confronts, says why family caregivers should be interested in it, and explains what it means for children with special needs. She t
