March 14th 2012: American Association of Individual Investors

Where does one start to master the challenge of investing their money? The subject is vast and the available resources are overwhelming. In today's volatile economic environment it is increasing vital to have a ready reliable, unbiased, timely, professional and readable place to turn. Individual investing is different from managing large institutional portfolios and that difference is clearly articulated by the American Association of Individual Investors (AAII). Charles Rotblut, the editor of the AAII Journal, will join us to share the scope of services and publications the organization o
