

Moir's Environmental Dialogues Archives Available
May 9th 2012: Saving Arctic Seabirds North of Alaska

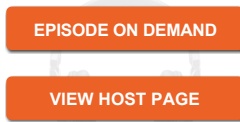

George Divoky, founder of Friends of Cooper Island, talks with Rob about his work studying the Black Guillemot seabird in Arctic Alaska. Lori Wark, web producer for Friends of Cooper Island, joined the conversation to explain how to get involved in this research. Since 1975 George has spent his summers on remote Cooper Island. What began as an ornithologist's quest to understand the behaviors of a rare seabird, however, has turned into the story of a changing Arctic. Due to the recent melting of Arctic sea ice in summer, polar bears have begun visiting the island in search of food, reducin

Read more

Tune in

Archives Available on VoiceAmerica Variety Channel

Featured Guests

George Divoky

Studying the Black Guillemots of Cooper Island has largely been a solitary venture for George Divoky. While the discovery and initial years of the study were part of governmental research related to oil development in northern Alaska,

Read more

Lori Wark

Lori Wark has been in the Web business almost since Al Gore invented the Internet. A short career in radio production and a quick stint in TV,

Read more

Share This Episode

Connect with VoiceAmerica

Download our mobile apps

