PI's Declassified! Thursday at 9 AM Pacific

August 23rd 2012: The Yuk Factor: Investigating Bestiality and Other Bizarre Acts

Some acts by people are unimaginable, even in the wildest of nightmares. Bestiality is an example. Most investigators never have such a case in a career. Surprisingly, such animal abuse is only a misdemeanor in most jurisdictions. It is only if there are other factors, such as those involving other humans, that bestiality becomes a serious concern in the legal arena. Tune in to hear California Private Investigator, Jan Tucker, share his wacky experiences investigating cases that are almost beyond belief.

Jan Tucker

Jan Tucker may have been destined to become a private investigator as he was born on August 25, the birthday of Detective Allen Pinkerton. Even then, he became a private investigator by a "fluke" when he was promoted from security officer to undercover investigator while working his way through graduate school. At the time he had Bachelors with a double major in Political Science and Chicano Studies and had completed 22 units towards his Masters when he was lured into investigation. He has never looked back. Jan has worked as an undercover operative as an industrial janitor, a hospital purchasing agent, as well as an operative in three industrial plants in the very neighborhood he grew u
