September 18th 2012: Aging Parents

Adult children want to make sure their parents are happy, healthy, and peaceful as they age. Yet many adult children and their parents aren't able to talk about the issues affecting them for a variety of reasons. Their silence leaves them feeling disconnected from each other at a crucial time in life. Join us this week on The Hoffman Connection with Shannon White as we explore critical conversations with aging parents.

Featured Guest

Shannon White

Shannon White is an award-winning speaker, Emmy-nominated television news reporter, and has been a Presbyterian clergywoman for over 20 years. She has served 3 congregations in Scarsdale, NY and Greenwich, CT, and as interim executive director of an interfaith organization. Ms. White is the author of 2 books: How Was School Today? Fine, which she wrote with her "tween" daughter, and her latest, The Invisible Conversations with Your Aging Parents. She plans to write more under her new trademark, The Invisible Conversations. She has spoken as keynoter, and retreat leader on the topic to a variety of groups, including employees at Microsoft headquarters. She has a BS in Business Admin.
