November 26th 2012: Looking at Value Stocks Using Growth Criteria

Today we are speaking with Paul M. DeSisto, CFA, Director and Senior Portfolio Manager with M&R Capital Management, Inc. M&R looks at value stocks using growth criteria, which includes 3 to 5 years projected earnings growth, 10% or more, AND positive earnings revisions over the last four weeks. They generally avoid commodity type companies, e.g. steel producers or commodity chemical companies, as they tend to be capital intensive, requiring significant cash flow to be reinvested back into the business just to remain competitive. For 2013 they lean toward dividend-paying stocks, as they believe
