House Calls
Thursday at 4 PM Pacific
January 3rd 2013: Making it in America

Dr. Connie knows what it takes to make it in America. Coming from an immigrant background, she understands the formula for success is determination and excellence. Listen as she talks about her examples and how you can apply those traits to your own life and career. Dr. Connie also welcomes Maureen Francisco to talk about her new book "It Takes Moxie," a similar story about rising from humble beginnings to living your dreams.

Maureen Francisco

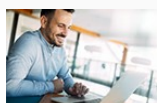

Maureen Francisco When Maureen was only five years old, her family immigrated to the US from the Philippines. At the time, she spoke very little English, which made her the target of teasing at school. When Maureen wanted to pursue further education, she worked three jobs after school and on weekends. It wasn't easy, but she persevered, and graduated cum laude from Pacific Lutheran University, with a degree in Print/Broadcast Journalism. She was the only graduate in her class offered an on-air position right out of college. Maureen spent the next five years rising in the ranks of the media world as a TV news reporter or weekend anchor at station affiliates around the country, ending up a
