April 2nd 2013: Family Respite Care

Keeping in line with our overall mission of providing support and assistance to the families of our nation's wounded and fallen, my personal mission is help relieve some of that stress our caregivers are constantly under, so they don't get sick or walk away, and I do that one family at a time. Our veterans deserve the best care available for their sacrifices, and that care is with family and loved ones, but not just the soldier goes to war....When America goes to war, her families go to war...and when that soldier comes home to heal, those families also need to heal. As that soldier adjusts

Wendy Tatro-Walker

Wendy Tatro-Walker is the Respite Program Director with Wounded Warriors Family Support. She has been both a Professional and Personal Caregiver for over 25 years and comes from strong military family which gives her a unique understanding of both dynamics. She began working with Caregivers after suffering some health issues of her own as the result of full time Caregiving and has been a staunch supporter since. The WWFS has provided a real opportunity to reach out to Wounded Veteran Families in order to help educate them on good caregiving habits, set up a support base for the Caregiver, as well as working with other organizations to provide Respite for those Caregivers in need.
