April 11th 2013: Special Encore Presentation: Dwindling
Herring and Clearing the Coastline

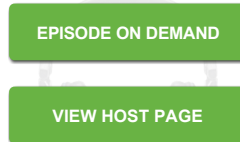

Matt McKenzie, Ph.D., UCONN & Patrick Paquette, striped bass fishing community organizer say where have all the herring gone, how Cape Cod has changed. McKenzie tells the social and ecological history of the rise and demise coastal fisheries in the 19th century. His book: Clearing the Coastline, includes Thoreau's thoughts on Cape Cod fisheries and how these changed after his death. Matt also tells of helping out a family's herring weirs on Cape Cod and of a fisherman well known to Paquette. Patrick explains early efforts to save herring through the CHOIR collaboration where different voices need
