December 1st 2011: Why Wait to Prepare for the Inevitable?

Carolyn Brent's passion for helping caregivers started when she was caring for her own father, who was diagnosed with dementia in 1997. From that experience, she found that neither she nor her family truly understood not only the medical challenges related to aging and chronic illness, but also the financial and emotional weight that these bring to bear on a family. Many of us have parents who are beginning to need more and more care and attention. What do we need to do and do we need to know to be prepared? Carolyn will address these questions. It is her goal in life is to empower caregivers
