July 29th 2013: Family Caregivers Business Goes to the Dogs with Healthcare Bureaucracy

Jim Tessman is a managing partner at www.healthwellnessdepot.com. His partner, Errol Shardelow, is a Bio Feedback therapist with an Advanced Diploma in Electronics. They share their personal stories and describe Health Wellness Depot. They explain PetPulse, their device for animals in pain. They identify obstacles to be overcome if the scientific principles that underpin PetPulse are to be made available in devices for humans, and the benefits that could be expected. They describe devices already available for humans that work on scientific principles similar to those for PetPulse, and discuss

Jim Tessman

Jim Tessman is a managing partner and the marketing specialist at Health Wellness Depot North America, based on Vancouver Island in British Columbia. With a keen eye on the future of healthcare and the changes that are quickly developing in user demands and regulations, he's moving Health Wellness Depot into a strong position to make new types of products available in North America. Pain management is the company's focus, as it can be so devastating to the one suffering as well as the entire family. He's collaborated with his business partner, Errol Shardelow, for nearly 7 years. The product he's most excited about right now is PetPulse, a 'fantastic' item out of the UK that reduces pain and
