August 8th 2013: The Must Have Skill for Success

Deanne takes the mic today and addresses the one skill every successful leader or entrepreneur must master. The skill and art of speaking in a public setting. Deanne has been a speech coach for over twenty years and has coached notable television and stage personalities and award winning speakers. She gives tips and strategies on how to overcome fear and a simple one minute a day exercise to help you in every speaking opportunity to come across with credibility. Deanne identifies the key area of speaking you will need to master and then she addresses each of them. Deanne DeMarco will share

Deanne DeMarco

Deanne DeMarco Deanne's career has revolved around helping people break through boundaries and career roadblocks. She has a strong business background with expertise in medicine, educations and utilities. As a medical scientist she was on the original three-member team that first discovered the cancer link to second-hand smoke (published in theLancet). As a corporate trainer her management coaching program won national recognition from Training Magazines Top 100. For more than 20 years she has helped managers and individuals advance their careers. Today, she continues her work as a executive and individual coach, she conducts fun, interactive workshops and seminars. And is a keynote speak
