August 26th 2013: Doubling of Deaths among Sick Moms-To-Be Highlights Medication Safety in Pregnancy

Dr. James Cave has been a family doctor for 20 years working in a rural practice in England. He's editor in chief of the www.dtb.bmj.com. He talks about his life as a family doctor, his experience with family caregiving, and his work as Editor in Chief of the Bulletin. He summarizes the Bulletin's editorial, 'Doubling of deaths among sick mums-to-be amid poor evidence on drug safety in pregnancy'. He describes key trends in pregnancy and their implications for health during and after pregnancy. He discusses the importance of medications now and in the future for maintaining health during preg
