October 17th 2013: Process Serving: Catch Me If You Can!

No one ever wants to receive legal papers. It doesn't matter whether it is a civil suit, a divorce, a garnishment or a subpoena to testify in a trial or deposition. Legal papers mean trouble! So it takes a special kind of person to execute the process of getting that critical legal document to the person it is intended. It is a specialty that requires bravado, tenacity, determination, and confidence, all rolled into one. Wendy Bignall, a private investigator and registered process server, is one of those people who knows how to overcome obstacles. Tune in to hear Wendy tell how she has become

Featured Guest

Wendy Bignall

After 26 years of operating Do Process, a business specializing in serving legal papers, Wendy Bignall founded Bignall Investigation Group in 2006. Wendy specializes not only in process serving, but in locating witnesses, skip tracing and surveillance. Wendy teaches the art and skill of process serving with a primary focus on those individuals who are the most difficult and elusive targets. In addition, Wendy logs an average of 1,500 hours of surveillance each year on behalf of her clients. With thousands of successful serves and locates under her belt, Wendy says, "The impossible has now become the normal."
