October 30th 2013: Extreme Archaeology: Doing Archaeology above the Arctic Circle

Imagine that you are an archaeologist carrying your equipment to site only to meet a polar bear along the way! Once you've arrived at site, weather conditions may mean the ground is too frozen to dig or you have a chance of getting hypothermia if you try waterscreening. While Indiana Jones is well known for his travels to far off places and harrowing recovery of artifacts, what are the dangers of archaeology in less desirable destinations? Our guest, Dr. Anne Jensen, has over 30 years experience working in Barrow, Alaska, the ninth northernmost city in the world! Although remote, the clima
