April 28th 2014: Family Caregiving for Women and the Alzheimer's Crisis

Dean M. Hartley completed his Ph.D. in Neuroscience at Stanford University in 1991 and is Director of Science Initiatives at the Alzheimer's Association, www.alz.org. He describes his work with the Association, mentions his personal experience with family caregiving, and explains the Association's mission. He highlights for women the key facts and figures in the Alzheimer's Association's March 2014 publication, 'Summary of Alzheimer's Disease Facts and Figures'. He discusses the challenges he sees arising from the facts and figures as these relate to the health of women generally and to women
