Good Grief with Cheryl Jones
Wednesday at 2 PM Pacific
April 16th 2014: Cultivating Resilience in Times of Loss

As a child, Marianna Cacciatore lost her best friend, who was murdered on her way home. Isolated with her grief, Marianna learned young the value of developing skills to support ourselves through loss. Deeply believing in the important and value of grieving, a primary focus of her career has been working with grieving families and creating tools to promote resilience in grieving people. Her message of hope and resilience, as well as willingness to truly embrace her own grief, inspires and moves us to stay on our road.
