May 13th 2014: Mental Healthcare for Mental Illness that Endangers Lives of Others

Dr. Lori Triano-Antidormi, PhD, is a Registered Psychologist in Ontario, Canada. She talks about her career, her life as a family caregiver, the killing of her son by a woman with mental illness, and the long-term effects on her of the killing. She explains how justice and healthcare systems respond to individuals with serious mental illnesses who have killed someone. She comments on the principle of "not criminally responsible". She highlights the changes she wants to see in the ways justice systems deal with cases of individuals, and in the ways healthcare systems care for individuals, with
