October 23rd 2014: Muddling through the Midterms

With early voting for 2014's Midterm elections underway in 35 of the 50 states, it's a good time to review the stakes and understand the trends as we approach November 4th. Joining me to discuss the White House's approach to these elections with its potential to alter control of the US Senate will be POLITICO's deputy White House editor Hilary Krieger.

Hilary Krieger

Deputy White House Editor for POLITICO. She joined POLITICO from The Washington Post, where she was an editor in the Opinions section. Before that she spent a decade at The Jerusalem Post, reporting on diplomacy, immigration and social issues in Jerusalem and then on the White House, State Department, Pentagon and Congress as the newspaper's Washington bureau chief. In addition, she covered the 2008 and 2012 presidential campaigns and the 2010 Winter Olympics. While in Israel, she also produced radio pieces for Marketplace. Krieger majored in American Studies at Cornell University, where she was editor-in-chief of The Cornell Daily Sun. After college she reported on city hall and stat
