Family Caregivers Unite! Archives Available May 12th 2015: Law and Lore of Autonomy and Mental Health Disabilities

Marni Soupcoff, a lawyer, is a newspaper columnist and Executive Director of the Canadian Constitution Foundation, and previously served the Institute for Justice. She describes her work and experience with family caregiving. She explains autonomy and highlights the challenges it creates for families and family caregivers caring for family members with mental illness or brain damage who may be unable to make decisions in their own best interests. She discusses the challenges created for privacy and social justice laws and for medical practice by autonomy when its lore is applied to individuals
