May 26th 2015: The Key To Launching A Startup In A Foreign Country

With over 90% of all startups failing, it is difficult enough to begin a startup in your own country. It is much more difficult in a foreign country. We give you seven pieces of advice that you really need to heed; Apple filed a patent last week for a hotspot device that will bring data connectivity to portable electronic devices. Does this mean that you will no longer have to take your phone with you to use your Apple watch; how strong are your password memory joggers, if you are like most people, they are pathetic; we salute Danielle Bernstein at 22-year-old blogger who gets paid $15,000 for

Terry Drayton

Terry Drayton loves entrepreneurship and thinks it's very important for our society and country, especially as a gateway to upward mobility and overall prosperity. Terry has spent the last 29 years doing 9 startups and was an investment banker before that helping other entrepreneurs raise money. After his third start-up he went back to school to become an entrepreneurship professor but didn't finish it, instead doing my fourth startup. I'm a 15 year volunteer, teacher, mentor, judge and board member at the University of Washington's Buerk Center for Entrepreneurship. Terry is the CEO of his new startup, Storage in Seattle and he is living proof that you don't need an education to be a suc
