December 29th 2015: Teacher Accused of Molestation Learns Tragic Lesson

At a time when good teachers are in such short supply because of low pay and aggressive students, it is sad when one such good teacher, namely Tonya Craft, is forced out because of false accusations of sexual molestation. She's the author of the new memoir, Accused: My Fight for Truth, Justice and the Strength to Forgive. Once a well-respected kindergarten teacher and loving mother, Tonya's world turned upside-down when three little girls (including one of her own), were manipulated into accusing her of molestation. She was presumed guilty until her trial finally acquitted her of all 22 counts

Tonya Craft

Tonya Craft, author of the new memoir "Accused: My Fight for Truth, Justice and the Strength to Forgive." was born and raised in Tennessee. She worked and went to school full-time, graduating with a Master's Degree in Education, and soon began teaching kindergarten in Georgia. Life was good until, in 2008, Tonya's life would change forever. Falsely accused of child molestation, she lost her home, career, reputation, savings and most importantly, her two children. Years of struggling with the judicial system educated Tonya more than any textbook, professor, or seminar ever could. She eventually won her court case, acquitted on all 22 counts. Since then, Tonya has served as a consultant on a
