Masey McLain

Masey McLain fell in love with acting in the 9th grade when she won Most Outstanding Actress in her first play. However, home videos easily show that her love for the camera developed at an early age. Masey signed with an agency when she was 15 years old, and has continued to book T.V., film, and print since. Masey is known for her leading role in I'm Not Ashamed, the story of Rachel Joy Scott at Columbine High School.

Joe Clokey

Son of Art and Ruth Clokey, the pioneering creators of Gumby, Joe Clokey was raised as Gumby's brother. Today Joe carries on his parents' legacy, introducing Gumby to the next generation of fans as the head of Gumby's animation studio and business affairs. As a young man in the 60's and 70's, Joe began studying the techniques of clay animation alongside his father at Clokey Productions. In 2001, and beyond, he continued the tradition by directing and producing various stop motion Gumby spots for ABC, Namco, Google and others. He produced the half hour TV special, Gumby's World, and one-hour Davey and Goliath special. Most recently, Joe has been working to re-master the entire Gumby library.
