Innovative Leaders Driving Thriving Organizations

Innovative Leaders Driving Thriving Organizations Tuesday at 11 AM Pacific March 07th 2017: Building Civic Leaders - Building Leadership and Creating Stronger Communities

The Kansas Leadership Center was established in 2007 to develop civic leadership across the state. Through its work, KLC aspires to transform the civic culture of Kansas. This requires developing civic leadership on a large scale. KLC now directly trains 2,000 people a year while thousands more have access to its leadership framework and curriculum. The organization's programs operate from the premise that civic leadership must become more purposeful, provocative, and engaging to make progress on the state's adaptive challenges. During this informative discussion, David and Ed talk about t

David Chrislip

For more than 40 years, David Chrislip has been helping people enhance their leadership capacities and collaboratively create visions and strategies for their organizations and communities. The broader purpose of his work is to build civil society. His work, both nationally and internationally, focuses on three areas: civic leadership development, collaboratively addressing complex community issues, and organizational strategy and development.

Ed O'Malley

Ed O'Malley - The titles "president" and "CEO" may conjure up traditional notions of authoritarian leadership, but, who holds those titles at the Kansas Leadership Center, doesn't see them that way. O'Malley spent four years as a state legislator, with a ringside seat for both effective and ineffective displays of civic leadership. To him, leadership is not a title, personality trait or workshop topic. Instead, it's an opportunity that people can grasp and choose to exercise in many different ways and venues.
