June 07th 2017:Encore: Volunteerism...the Younger Generations Jump In

This enlightening and energizing episode is a conversation with several young adults who each volunteer their time with non-profit organizations. Their volunteerism spans from animal care to teen adoptions. This fascinating group of guests will share their stories of where and why they began volunteering as well as what motivates them to remain engaged. This important discussion will help us (non-profit leaders and managers) better understand how to use social media to recruit volunteers, how to provide interesting projects and supervisory oversight, how to leverage the strengths they bring.

Margie and Chelsea

A Mother-Daughter team, Margie and Chelsea, (last name withheld for privacy) from Phoenix Arizona, will join the conversation providing unusual insight gained from Chelsea's volunteer efforts at Catholic Charities. Chelsea, now 26, serves as a volunteer speaker to pregnant teens, who are considering adoption. Chelsea speaks about her difficult personal decision, at age 18, to use an open adoption process. Without advocating for one choice over another, she benefits by knowing her volunteer efforts help others.
