Channel

Fake news is not only in politics. It also limits our understanding of illness and how to cure it. Just like with fake news, some believe they're telling the truth and others know they're misleading people. Here are some examples of fake medical news coming from sources we were taught to trust. Public television promoted a program on the definitive causes of depression without mentioning trauma, which many believe is the main source of depression. In a recent PBS special on bone density, the authority told us there is no way to build bone density despite the fact that a 10 minute a week exerci
